

100 Niche Briefs

Researched starting points for Amazon KDP low- and medium-content books — coloring books, kids activity books, planners, logbooks, journals, workbooks, and more. Pick a brief, validate it the way Lesson 2 teaches, then build it better than what's already there.

How to Use This Book

Each brief gives you one specific niche angle — not a whole category — with the target buyer, two example title concepts, seven keyword phrases buyers actually type, a suggested category path, and a seasonal note. Ten groups of ten cover the formats that make up most of low- and medium-content publishing on KDP.

Work in this order: (1) shortlist three to five briefs that fit what you can actually design and write; (2) run the validation check below on each one; (3) build only the briefs that pass; (4) model your interior on the best books already ranking — then make yours visibly better: more pages of real content, a cleaner layout, a cover that reads at thumbnail size.

The title concepts are exactly that — concepts. Use them as your starting draft, then adjust the wording to what your validation search shows buyers typing. Never copy another seller's exact title, cover, or interior.

An Honest Word About the Numbers

You will notice this book contains no search volumes, no competitor counts, no best-seller ranks, and no earnings figures. That is deliberate. Marketplaces change weekly: a search volume printed in a PDF is stale before the file finishes downloading, and a competitor count from last season tells you nothing about the shelf today. Numbers in books like this are usually estimates dressed up as measurements, and building a business on them is how sellers end up in dead niches with beautiful books.

Instead, every brief in this book was built on the method from the course: specific audience, specific occasion or job, a title a buyer would actually type. That structure is what makes a niche worth testing — but the test itself can only be run live, by you, on the day you run it. That is what the validation check is for, and it is not optional.

The Validation Check (From Lesson 2)

Run every step for your brief's main keyword phrase — usually the first keyword listed — before you design a single page:

- ☐ Search the main keyword phrase on Amazon, in Books, exactly as a buyer would type it. Note what the search actually returns: are the results really this kind of book, or something else that happens to share the words?
- ☐ Read the result count. A phrase returning a flood of results is a crowded shelf; a phrase returning almost nothing may mean low demand rather than low competition. Neither number decides anything alone — it is one signal among several.
- ☐ Open the first page of results. Do the books there show Best Sellers Ranks? Ranks present on several page-one books indicate copies are moving. A first page where nothing shows a rank suggests a dead niche — or an empty one; the next checks help you tell the difference.

- ☐ Look at review counts on the first page. Books with reviews in the tens or hundreds show real buyers exist here; a page of zero-review books that have been listed for months is a warning sign.
- ☐ Check the publication dates. Recent books on page one mean new sellers can still break in. If every page-one book is years old and nothing new has cracked the page, expect a harder climb.
- ☐ Judge the quality honestly. Weak covers, thin interiors, and the same design repeated are opportunity — the opening the course teaches you to take. Polished, well-reviewed books mean you must be at least that good.
- ☐ Repeat the check with the second and third keyword phrases. A niche that looks alive from three different phrases is far safer than one that only works for a single search.
- ☐ Decide in writing: build, park, or drop. If a brief fails, move to the next one — there are 99 more, and the method matters more than any single pick.

Rule of the house: no brief in this book is a promise. A brief plus a passed validation check plus a better book is a real plan. A brief alone is just a good idea — and KDP is full of good ideas nobody validated.

How Each Brief Is Built

Buyer — the specific person the book is for. If you cannot picture them, the niche is not narrow enough yet; narrow it before you build.

Title concepts — two drafts that front-load the main keyword phrase and name the buyer or benefit. Pick one, then tune it against your live search results.

Keywords — seven phrases a buyer might type into Amazon search. Use them in validation first; the ones that prove out become your backend search terms and the spine of your product description.

Category — a suggested browse path in Amazon's general category style. Category trees change; confirm the closest current path when you publish, and pick the most specific one your book honestly fits.

Season — whether the brief sells all year (Evergreen) or leans on a season, and when to list by. Low-content books need lead time: list weeks ahead of the peak so your book exists when buyers arrive, not after.

Your Commercial License — Plain English

Your purchase of the Niche & Interior Vault includes the right to use these briefs commercially, on these terms:

YOU MAY use any brief in this book as the basis for your own books — design your own interiors and covers, publish them on Amazon KDP or similar platforms, sell as many copies as you like, and keep all of the revenue. You may adapt the title concepts and keyword phrases as part of publishing your own books.

YOU MAY NOT resell, give away, share, or redistribute this briefs book itself — in whole or in part, in its original form or reformatted — and you may not offer the briefs themselves as a product, bonus, or lead magnet. Your customers buy the books you create; the research file stays yours alone.

In short: build and sell all the books these briefs inspire. Don't sell the briefs.

Coloring Books

The most forgiving format in low-content publishing: one strong theme, clean line art, single-sided pages. A general "animals" coloring book competes with everyone; a coloring book for one breed, one hobby, or one profession has a buyer who can picture exactly who it is for — and gift buyers can find it.

Planners

A planner sells when it matches a job or a life moment exactly. "Planner" alone is a crowded shelf; a planner built around one profession's day or one season of life feels made for its buyer — because it is. Undated pages keep every one of these sellable all year.

BRIEF 21 · PLANNERS

Teacher Planner (Lessons + Grade Book)

Buyer: Classroom teachers who plan on paper

Title concepts: Teacher Planner: Lesson Plans, Grade Book, and Classroom Records in One Book | Lesson Plan Book for Teachers: Weekly Planning Pages and Class Rosters

Keywords: homeschool planner · homeschool organizer · homeschool lesson planner · homeschool record book · homeschool mom planner · homeschool planning notebook · curriculum planner

Category: Books > Education & Teaching > Homeschooling

Season: Seasonal — summer planning season; list by April

Logbooks

Logbooks are records people are motivated — sometimes required — to keep: miles for taxes, maintenance for resale, catches for memory. The buyer knows the job the book does before they open it, so the cover and title just have to say that job clearly and the pages have to do it without friction.

BRIEF 31 · LOGBOOKS

Vehicle Mileage Log Book

Buyer: Self-employed drivers and anyone claiming miles at tax time

Title concepts: Mileage Log Book: Vehicle Miles, Trips, and Fuel Records for Business and Taxes | Car Mileage Tracker: Daily Driving Log with Odometer and Expense Pages

Category: Books > Crafts, Hobbies & Home > Home Improvement

Season: Evergreen — January organizing lift; list by November

Journals

A journal is a promise: a few minutes a day aimed at one part of life. Guided prompts justify the purchase over a blank notebook, and the audience on the cover — for teens, for nurses, for someone grieving — is what makes a buyer stop scrolling. Handle sensitive topics (grief, recovery) gently and honestly.

BRIEF 41 · JOURNALS

Gratitude Journal for Women

Buyer: Women building a short daily gratitude practice

Title concepts: Gratitude Journal for Women: Five Minutes a Day of Prompts and Reflections | Daily Gratitude Journal: A Guided Year of Thankfulness, One Page at a Time

Category: Books > Parenting & Relationships > Family Life

Season: Evergreen — baby showers and Mother's/Father's Day

Workbooks

Workbooks are medium-content: real practice pages a parent can see working. Grade level plus one skill in the title ("multiplication, grade 3") beats a big general workbook almost every time, because parents shop for the exact gap the teacher just mentioned.

BRIEF 51 · WORKBOOKS

Hobby & Craft Books

Hobbyists keep records the way fans keep score: tastings, sightings, projects, bakes. A log or project journal matched to one hobby — and one level of obsession — outsells a generic notebook because it speaks the hobby's own language on its data pages.

Season: Evergreen — Christmas family gifting; list by October

Home & Family Books

These books organize the paperwork of a household: recipes worth keeping, a newborn's first weeks, the documents a family would need in an emergency. Buyers are often gift-givers — a blank recipe book for a newlywed, an address book for a parent — so clear, warm covers matter as much as good pages.

BRIEF 71 · HOME & FAMILY BOOKS

Category: Books > Business & Money > Personal Finance

Season: Evergreen — January organizing lift; list by November

Sports & Outdoors

Athletes and outdoors people are measurers: scores, times, trails, sessions. A log built for one sport's actual stats — not a generic fitness notebook — is the one they re-order, and sports logs are classic gifts from people who know the hobby but not the gear.

BRIEF 81 · SPORTS & OUTDOORS

Season: Seasonal — summer surf season; list by March

Professions & Business

Small businesses run on appointments, clients, and records — and plenty still run on paper at the counter. An appointment book or client log designed for one trade's vocabulary (stations, sessions, routes, orders) beats a generic planner the moment the buyer flips through the page headings.
